

Dan: Hello, listeners! Today's podcast will be special as James hasn't really done anything of note for once, other than hide from his local mental home which for James, really isn't too bad. We can't laugh at him for getting arrested, etc., but what we can do is interview him!

Ben: Yes, and if the listeners have any questions for him, just phone the show!

Dan: First up though, I have a question.

James: Go on...

Dan: What's wrong with you?

James: What do you mean?

Ben: What Dan is trying to find out is, why do you act the way you do?

James: Are you suggesting I have a personality disorder?

Dan: Didn't you once say you had all of the personality disorders?

James: No, that was a joke.

Dan: Ah, so you finally realised it's not good to be mental?

James: Err...

Ben: I have an idea.

Dan: What?

Ben: We read a list of personality disorders and ask if James has them as we look into his eyes, to detect any lies...

James: What do you mean?

Ben: Well, first up... Do you have schizotypal personality disorder?

James: No.

Ben: Look me in the eyes and say that again...

Dan: He's starting to cry...

Ben: I noticed that too.

James: Ok, fine. I have schizotypal personality disorder.

Dan: Why are you suddenly feeling so guilty.

James: I've visited Wikipedia and some descriptions of such disorders are very unkind.

Dan: I'm just Googling schizotypal PD now...

Ben: You have nothing to fear, James. It's all ok...

Dan: Right! People like you are insipid? That's what the internet says.

James: What's that mean?

Dan: Lacking flavour!

James: I admit that I'm not always 100% full of life but that was offensive.

Dan: There's more!

Ben: Go on...

Dan: Would you describe yourself as a sluggish person?

James: What, like a slug?

Dan: I would compare you to a slug, but in this case it kinda means lazy. Can't be bothered to walk like a normal person.

James: Again, there are highs and lows but certainly not all the time.

Dan: Great. And how about if I were to call you strange?

James: Now this is what I mean! You can't say those kind of things, you certainly can't diagnose me as strange how's that supposed to make me feel??

Ben: What about if I say you're an eccentric?

James: Oh, that's not so bad.

Dan: But eccentric is a euphemism for strange. You're an eccentric to the point it's a disorder.

James: You can't let me have ONE thing can you?

(A phone rings)

Caller 1: Hello!

Dan: Hello, caller. What is your question for James?

Caller 1: My question is: What were you like at school?

James: What was I like? I was a jock.

Caller 1: A jock? What's that mean? You were a jockey?

James: No, not a jockey. A jock.

Caller 1: What do you mean?

James: Google it.

Dan: I'll Google it for you. Jocks are 'aggressive, arrogant, egotistical, muscular, tall, athletic, handsome, does not cry, and are frequently given privileges...

James: Yep.

Ben: That's not how I remember you...

James: How do you remember me, then?

Ben: You just sat doing nothing all day. You were insipid.

James: Oh no, no, no. I was just really bored, that's all.

Dan: Bored all day?

James: What can I say, I just found school to be dull.

Ben: What did you do when at home, then?

James: More or less the same thing...

Ben: Ok.

Caller 1: To be clear, were you a jock or insipid?

James: I was a jock! Stop saying I don't taste of anything!

Ben: Ok, any other questions?

(A phone rings)

Caller 2: Hi. What are your main hobbies, James?

James: Judging others and accusing people of things they didn't do.

Dan: Oh God.

Ben: Well at least THAT'S true.

James: Yes, it really is more of a passion than a hobby. A way of life.

Caller 2: Why?

Dan: It's because he's strange.

James: It's not because I'm strange, it's because... Errr...

Dan: You're an asshole?

James: No...

Dan: It's because you're an idiot?

James: Next question.

(A phone rings)

Caller 3: Why aren't you in a mental home?

James: I ditched the pink wedding dress so now psychiatrists don't know what I'm dressed in anymore, and can't find me.

Dan: Yes, it should be pointed out that James is now wearing a huge, novelty, foam hand. His head is sticking out of one of the fingers. His feet are sticking out of the palm of the hand... He has to waddle everywhere to move.

James: Again, not because I'm strange, but to avoid capture.

Dan: Even though it does SOUND strange.

James: Right.

Ben: And of course the way you are dressed is certainly not insipid!

James: Right, thank you!

Caller 3: Where did you get it?

James: Well, I have no money as you know, so I had to steal it.

Dan: James, did you steal it whilst wearing your pink wedding dress?

James: It was my only option.

Dan: James, I'm being serious. You surely know the stories that are surely being told about you?

James: Not insipid.

Caller 3: Surely the hospital staff know you work in the podcast studio?

James: You make an interesting point. I fear I'm going to be captured any second.

Caller 3: I guess when the show is finished in a minute or so, you should run away?

Dan: Yes, waddle away in your novelty hand.

James: I'd look weird again, wouldn't I?

Dan: James, you do know I'm not going to help you get away? What would I say to your doctors if I did?

James: You could say you were being friendly, because you don't have a personality disorder. Not only would you do nothing wrong, you'd be mentally healthy, too!... Right, Dan?... Dan?... Right, Dan? Pal?

Ben: Well done, Dan. You've done the right thing.

James: Why has he locked the door and swallowed the key?... Dan?... Feeling peckish? Got a severe case of pica?... Dan?

Dan: Look what you've made me do! I have a key stuck in my throat!

James: Ok, you can't claim to be sane anymore, but you've got to help me! Just say you thought the key was a biscuit, some biscuits are very small too! The same colour as well, if covered in icing, we can come up with a plan together! Dan!

Dan: Podcast over!
